It is better to take a chance upon not speaking when you should than to chance saying something when not certain whether it is proper or not.

Suspect May Be Deported

Fred Levy, who is being held in the county jail on the charge of murdering John Anderson, may be deported to Australia and escape prosecution. The British Consulate made the offer to District Attorney Franklin Swart and, since there is little evidence with which to press the murder charge against Levy, it is probable that the authorities will permit Levy's return to Australia.

Levy went hunting with Anderson on the Hobart estate in Hillsborough and returned alone. He reported to the authorities that his companion was lost. The next day Anderson's body with a bullet hole through the head was found by the officers. Levy later admitted that he knew Anderson was dead and that he had found the body with a pistol beside it and had placed the weapon in Anderson's hand. He said he did this so that he would not be suspected of killing his friend.

GRAND LAND SHOW

San Mateo County's Exhibit Is The Most Varied Display---Friday, Oct. 24, Portola Parade Day, To Glorify County

The big California Land Show and Home Industry Exhibition opened its doors last Saturday, October 11, to the largest crowd that has ever attended the opening of any exhibition in San Francisco since the Mid-Winter Fair, nearly two decades ago.

San Mateo county takes a notable part in this affair. Our exhibit is the talk of the show. Every San Matean who has viewed it did so with a feeling of surprise and pride.

A. L. Harrigan, president of the San Francisco Real Estate Board, the organization which is promoting the Land Show, informed Frank L. Eksward, who is in charge af this county's exhibits, on the opening day that he personally felt that this county was entitled to a special prize for the best and most varied exhibit made by any county.

It is probably best to make no attempt to describe the various beautiful exhibits made in the name of our county. This is done in the hope that every resident will take the opportunity of visiting the land show and judging for himself. The show is open from 10 a. m. to 11 p. m. every day, closing Saturday evening, October 25.

Realizing the importance of San Mateo county in its relation to San Francisco, the officials of the Land Show have set aside Friday, October 24, the date of the Portola parade, as San Mateo County Day. This was done at the request of the representative of the Development Association, knowing that this day was to be the most important of all, because of the visiting throngs.

The Peninsula World's Fair Band, under the direction of Alois Winkler, will render a special musical program from 7:30 to 10:30 p. m. on San Mateo County Day. The band is composed of 50 musicians. Ours is the only county out of 30 which are exhibiting that will feature its day by an undertaking of this magnitude.

It is the aim of the San Mateo County Development Association to so impress the name of this county upon the minds of the countless thousands of strangers who will be in San Francisco during the Portola festivities that they will be anxious to view our county in person.

The popularity of the Land Show has exceeded the expectations of the most enthusiastic booster. Daily the attendance grows larger. The largest of all will be on San Mateo County Day because of the parade.

Work on Coast Side Roads

The first dirt to be moved on the Coast Side in the construction of the boulevard will be in Denniston precinct, the precinct that cast every vote for the bonds.

In may be the honor of a reward of merit or it may be because on last Sunday, when Supervisor Francis was entertaining Supervisor MacBain by an auto trip around the Triangle, they encountered the difficult grades between Farralon and Moss Beach and saw the wisdom of eliminating this at once. This will cover the route from Thomas Steele's residence in Moss Beach to the Farrallon Hotel, and will give an easy grade as far north as Montara Mountain. Many autos coming from the south now stop at Moss Beach. When this piece of roadway is graded the Triangle trip can be made with ease and pleasure. The elimination of this grade and the macadamizing of the Sunshine Valley road will make a circuit of sightseeing which autoists cannot afford to miss.

Grading on Montara Mountain will be done and the way opened for travel along the coast to San Francisco.—Coast Side Comet.

COLMA MAN KILLED

Amerigo Micheletti, a young Italian resident of Colma, died at Mary's Help Hospital Sunday morning as the result of an automobile accident on Saturday night near South San Francisco.

Micheletti was in a machine driven by a man named Perasso, who resides in Athens street, and with them was Albert A. Molfino, an attorney.

The steering gear broke and the car ran into a ditch and was overturned. Micheletti's back was broken and he lived only a few hours after being taken to the hospital. He was a native of Italy and 26 years of age.

BUILDING CONTRACTS

Charles Miller agrees to erect for Grover C. Elam in 75 days a dwelling on lot 9, block 9, Wellesley Park, for $2714. This does not include the finish hardware, hardwood floor material and interior painting.

F. W. Snook agrees to do the plumbing work on the new C. Frederick Kohl building at Easton for $2872.

In the matter of the termination of the community interest of Annie Coogan in certain property near Redwood City—Order terminating same and title vested in husband of deceased.

Mary Taylor vs. B. Taylor—Continued to October 16.

Royal A. Carter et al vs. Etta M. Simpson—Demurrer submitted.

People vs. Carl Klevesahl—Time to plead continued to October 16.

Geo. W. McGinn vs. D. S. Dorn—Demurrer submitted.

The suit of Mrs. L. H. Barney against her grandson, Benjamin B. Stanley, which has been pending for some time on the calendar, has been amicably adjusted and settled to the mutual satisfaction of all.

Judge Buck has granted a final decree of divorce to Jennie Silvernail from Goldie Silvernail. The interlocutory decree was granted October 9, 1912, on the ground of extreme cruelty. The plaintiff resides in South San Francisco.

R. F. Chilcott, inheritance-tax appraiser of the estate of Bridget Cunningham, deceased, has filed his inventory and appraisement. The property of the estate consists of lot 10, block 47, Eastern Addition to Redwood City, appraised at $600.

Rosa Quadro has applied for letters of administration upon the estate of her husband, John Quadro, who was drowned at Pescadero September 29. The estate consists of four parcels of real estate in and near Pescadero, valued at about $10,000, and personal property consisting of 11 head of horses, eight head of cattle and farming utensils valued at $1500. The entire value of the estate does not exceed the sum of $13,000. The heirs at law are the petitioner, wife of the ages range from one to 20 years. Franklin Swart is attorney for the petitioner.

Mary Silva Costa has brought suit against her daughter-in-law, Katherine Silva, to have the marriage of defendant and Albert Silva, son of the plaintiff, annulled and set aside on the ground that young Silva was not of legal age when he was married December 2, 1911. The complaint alleges that the boy will not be 21 until April 12, 1914. Mrs. Costa was divorced from her former husband in 1911 and at that time the court awarded the custody of Albert to his mother. She has since married again. All the parties to the action reside in San Mateo.

The jury in the case of Frank H. Poor against the W. P. Fuller Co. brought in a verdict last Thursday afternon in favor of the plaintiff for $3000. The jury was not out more than 15 minutes. On July 1, 1912, Frank H. Poor was employed at the W. P. Fuller paint works at South San Francisco and was seriously injured by a falling box, it is alleged, through the carelessness of the company. A chute was located on the second floor of the company's building through which boxes weighing 25 pounds were sent to the first floor. One of the boxes struck Poor, inflicting severe injuries. He was laid up for several months and may never regain the use of his right arm. He brought suit for $10,000. At the trial much expert testimony was presented by both sides.

M. J. Hynes, guardian of the person and estate of Loren Coburn, an incompetent person, appeared in court with his attorneys in response to a citation issued some time ago requiring him to appear and show cause why he should not pay Archer Kincaid $15,000 attorney fees for services rendered the aged capitalist and extending over five years. The attorneys for Hynes objected to the procedure, raising the point that the court had no jurisdiction. No objection was made to the claim. The court agreed with counsel and suggested that a claim be filed with the guardian, who could, if he saw fit, reject it, and Kincaid could then sue on the bill and in that way the matter might be properly determined by the court. Kincaid also agreed that the suggestion was a good one and that it would be the proper procedure. The citation was dismissed and Kincaid will at once file a claim with the guardian. Hynes promised to expedite matters so that the case could be determined shortly.

Vancouver, British Columbia, has some 40,000 less population than Oakland, but it has 167 factories, employing 9000 persons, and the payroll is $5,669,000. Incidentally, Vancouver does not tax improvements or manufacturing machinery.

If the Mexicans keep on playing horse, Uncle Sam may have to step in and set up a stable government.

REDWOOD CITY RUMBLINGS

C. D. Hayward, the popular Assessor, is spending his two weeks' vacation in the wilds of Humboldt county, whipping the streams for trout and salmon.

Mr. Hanaran, the contractor of the highway, says that the road from Redowod City to within four hundred feet of the San Francisquito bridge will be finished by November 5th. The bridge is expected to be completed two weeks later.

Tax Collector MsSweeney has prepared his office for receiving taxes by the installation of a new cashier's counter and otherwise rearranging his office for the convenience of the clerks.

Members of Redwood Parlor, N. S. G. W., will journey to San Mateo in a body on October 18 and help San Mateo to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the reorganization of the parlor.

Court Madrone has installed a Mission piano of the very latest make in the new hall.

PROBATE MATTERS

Estate and guardianship of Loren Coburn, an incompetent person—Order made directing guardian to pay costs.

MENLO PARK MENTION

A fire started at the Barney place, new pumping plant only recently erected. Sparks from a brush fire caused the blaze. The total loss is estimated at $1000. There was no insurance.

Rev. Montgomery, the new pastor of Trinity Episcopal church, who went to New York recently to be ordained, will arrive here with his family the first of the month. He has rented the MacBain house an Mills avenue for a long period. The Montgomerys will be a splendid acquisition to Menlo Park society.

The impact of the heavy steam roller on the highway at the corner of Oak Grove avenue and the county road caused the Bear Gulch pipe to burst and for a time the town was threatened with an inundation. The streets were flooded with water. Will Casey with a crew soon stopped the flow and repaired the pipe after working all of Wednesday night.

Three engineers in the employ of W. R. Hoag & Co. are now on the grounds planning extensive improvements in Stanford Park, which will be made as soon as the state highway and bridge over San Francisquito creek are opened. A large force of men is to be employed on the tract for some time. Street improvements will be made and ornamental gates are to be erected.

J. R. Daly, for several years the obliging Wells-Fargo agent here, will depart on the first of the month, accompanied by his family, to become the agent for the company at come the agent for the company at San Rafael. The agency here will be given to Mr. Wardwell, the local station agent, and the business of the company hereafter will be done at hte depot. All deliveries will be from that place. Mr. and Mrs. Daly carry with them to their new home the best wishes of the people of Menlo Park.

The members of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society are very active in their preparation for the forthcoming flower show, which will begin on October 31 and continue for three days. It promises to be one of the best displays of rare blooms ever held in the State. The sum of $400 and nine silver cups will be given away in prises.

Rev. G. L. Morrill, of Minneapolis, says: "The split skirt shows a cracked brain and an empty heart." Rev. G. L. Morrill has a very misty idea about skirts, or is off on the location of hearts and brains.

The creator had an idea for the happiness of mankind when he neglected to make mind readers of us.

COAST SIDE OF SAN MATEO CO.

What Our Neighbors Along the Pacific's Shore Have Been Doing, Are Doing and Will Do

The grading for the streets in the Moss Beach-Marine View civic center tracts are completed and shows up beautifully. It fronts on the new automobile boulevard to be built from San Francisco and puts it in a very short running distancce from the metropolis.

Andrew Taft, an old-time resident of this county, died inSan Francisco last Thursday at the advanced age of 86 years. He was a native of the State of New York and for many years past resided in Moss Beach. Mr. Taft owned the stage line between Half Moon Bay and San Mateo, from 1860 to 1870 drove a stage coach himself. He was highly respetcded and beloved by all the old timers of the county.

The newly organized Half Moon Bay High School Band is making rapid progress and it is thought that within a few months the oastside will have an organization to be proud of and one that can furnish music for all occasions.

An improvement and social club was organized at Salada Beach at a recent date with R. McDonald president, C. Gusterson vice-president and Mrs. Strong secretary-treasurer. This club has several improvements to make, among which are the organization of a highway-lighting district and the establishment of a water system, owned and controlled by the people.

Mrs. H. H. McCloskey of Salada Beach was a city visitor last Wednesday. Attorney and Mrs. McCloskey own the castle-like house on the heights overlooking Salada Beach and have expended to date over $24,000 on the same, and at the present time are spending $5000 in building retaining walls and an observation tower.

It is certainly great to live in a climate like that of the Coast Side of San Mateo County.

Mrs. Joseph Nash of Redwood City, wife of County Clerk Nash, is here visiting her parents, J. F. Wienke and wife.—Comet.

C. B. Smith's list of telephone subscribers has grown very encouragingly. This is one thing the public is always assured of when Mr. Smith is out working for the general good. He has always been quick to see the greatest good to the greatest number and is no knocker. Mr. Smith has taken valuable time to work out the interests of the telephone question and a need which has been very much felt will be supplied as quickly as the system can now be established.

A mountain lion in the Tobin district has driven a number of deer to the brush near the vegetable gardens and the growers are kept busy driving them off to protect their crops.

The San Francisco Striped Bass Club chartered a car from the Ocean Shore Railroad Sunday and came to Farrallone City, where the members enjoyed a day's outing on the lighthouse beach.

Bertini Brothers of Colma visited Montara Sunday with a view of leasing 20 acres of land for violet gardens.

Miss Annie Savage, who is attending school in Moss Beach is visiting her mother and friends at Half Moon Bay.

E. Olney of San Francisco has purchased the house at Half Moon Bay formerly occupied by Editor Garwood. This house is now being occupied by Mrs. Olney and a daughter, Margaret.

Sheriff J. H. Mansfield paid the Coast Side an official visit last Wednesday.

Robert F. Gallagher's house at Farrallone, which is being built at a cost of over $10,000, is nearly completed. This building is one of the neatest and best built houses on the entire Coast Side and would be a credit to any community.

George Lowans Injured

Motorcycle Policeman George Lowans of San Mateo county was painfully injured Sunday afternoon while in ppursuit of a speeding automobile on the State Highway near Millbrae. Another machine crossed his path, with the evident intent of blocking his pursuit, and, to avoid a collision, he skidded the motorcycle off the road. He was thrown to the ground and knocked insensible. He was taken to the Red Cross Hospital in San Mateo, where it was found that he had a badly wrenched back.

Tuesday morning Lowans was removed from the hospital to his home at Colma, where he is getting along nicely, though he will be laid up for some time, as his back was very badly strained in the terrific fall.

You can't be the big mogul in a half dozen lodges and be a shining light around home at the same time.

Half Moon Bay Street Improvement

Supervisor Francis is evidently one of those men who regard a promise as sacred. When the voting of bonds for the Coast Boulevard was being agitated, Mr. Francis, a warm advocate of the highway, pledged himself that, in case the bonds carried, he would see to it that the streets of Half Moon Bay would be covered with crushed rock before the beginning of the rainy season. The bonds carried and now Mr. Francis is carrying out his part of the agreement. Practically every street in town, except Main street, which will become a part of the State Highway, is being covered with crushed rock to a depth of eight inches.—Review.

There must be a large number of ignorant ones so that the wise ones may have someone upon whom to demonstrate their wisdom.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON

THE REPORT OF THE SPIES.

Numbers 13:1-3, 17 to 14:25—Oct. 19.

"If God be for us, who can be against us?"—Romans 8:31.

THE Israelites' first journey was from Egypt to Mt. Sinai, where they remained about a year. Their second journey began after Miriam had been received back into the camp. Their journey led through a barren wilderness scorched by the sun, very different from Sinai's valleys, in which they had rested. The distance to Kadesh-Barnea, on the border of Canaan, was approximately 160 miles. The journey was beset with unknown dangers—serpents, wandering bands of Arabs, lack of water, etc. The Israelites, including women and children and possessions, household goods, cattle, sheep, etc., necessarily travelled slowly. Apparently one or two months were spent on the way, as they arrived at the time of the first ripe grapes—July.

Fruits and a Fertile Country.

Kadesh-Barnea, their objective point, is a delightful place, well watered—a sharp contrast to the Desert of Paran. Here they rested and refreshed themselves. Moses, full of faith, proposed that they proceed forthwith to enter Canaan, the Land of Promise.

But the Israelites were timid. They had no knowledge of war, excepting a little experience with the Amalekites near Mt. Sinai. Their caution overbalanced their faith. They urged upon Moses the sending of the twelve spies. These apparently were divided under two leaders, Caleb and Joshua. One party went the length of the land, and returned in forty days; the others took a shorter journey and returned sooner.

The spies were cautious men and gave a truthful report of the land, declaring that its cities had high walls and would be difficult to overcome. They reported also that they had seen giants. The report of the ten is described as an evil report because they presented the matter from the viewpoint of its difficulties, as in contrast with the report made by Caleb and Joshua, which was styled a good report, because encouraging.

The spies really should have considered themselves as a committee of ways and means for entering Canaan, rather than for deciding whether it was possible to enter. The possibilities were already determined by God's promise; hence Joshua and Caleb left these out of account. If God could deliver them from the Egyptians and the Amalekites He surely could fulfil His promise to bring them into Canaan.

Did God Encourage War?

In studying this lesson, many are perplexed. They say, It seems unreasonable to believe that God gave such a message to Moses and the Israelites. Contrast this with the Scriptural declaration that God "will make wars to cease unto the ends of the earth." Agnostics inquire, Where is the justice of commissioning the Israelites to steal the lands of the Canaanites, and to exterminate utterly all the people?

To understand the Bible, we must view it from its own standpoint, and not from that of our creeds formulated in the darker days, nor from that of our own imperfect reasoning. The Bible is beautiful, consistent, Godlike, only when viewed in its own light.

We must remember that the Bible antagonizes the theories of our creeds, which tell us that those slaughtered Canaanites went straight to an eternity of torture because they did not know the true God and Jesus Christ, the Savior. The Bible tells us that all mankind are children of Adam, and all perishing because of his death sentence. When they die, they are not alive anywhere. They are dead. They are suffering the penalty that God pronounced, "Dying, thou shalt die."

It matters not, therefore, in what way we die, or very much whether our experiences be longer or shorter. In the case of the Canaanites, God declared that their iniquity had come to the full. That is, God determined that they were merely cumbering the earth.

God was using the Israelites as a typical people, through whom He was making types and shadows of coming blessings. He would give Canaan to Israel, to illustrate the destruction of the works of the flesh and the Devil, which His people would accomplish in themselves by fighting the good fight of faith and overcoming the evil tendencies of their own flesh.

THE CHRISTIAN'S FIGHT WITH SELF

Overcoming Evil Tendencies.

Although God is not bound by Justice to give future life to anybody, He has arranged to do so. To this end Christ has already died for the sins of the whole world—including the Canaanites. Aside from this Plan of Redemption the whole race would have perished. But by God's grace we are to be recovered from death.

So we read, "God so loved the world that He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life." Messiah's Kingdom—the Redeemer and His Church, His Bride, the members of which are now being selected from the world—will for a thousand years bless, uplift and restore all the nations of earth—from sin, degradation, death.

FOR THE COQUETTE.

The "Follow Me" Sash Is Very New.

SASH AT BACK OF GOWN.

The girl who is flirtatiously inclined calls this coquettishly placed sash a "follow me" bow. The ribbon catches back a very graceful tunic draped above a skirt short enough to reveal a snappy buttoned walking boot.

Why the Man Walks In Front.

When husband and wife go traveling together in the orient the man walks in front, careless and free, and the woman walks behind, carrying the bundle. Therefore you say: "The oriental cares not for his women. He despises his wife, and uses her as a beast of burden." Many occidentals never get further than this. But if you are observant, says a writer in the Christian Age, "you go out in the jungle yourself, and you discover things.

"The paths are overgrown and thorny. Creepers must be cut back. There are cattle and buffaloes to be driven off, and buffaloes are ugly creatures. There are snakes. In the villages are village dogs, which snarl and snap. You are a man, yet you will be glad of some one to go in front of you with a hatchet to clear your way. No woman would walk in front, and the man must be free. Now you see the reason why the man walks in front."

Girdles and Sashes.

The girdle or sash plays a very important part in the season's styles. Very many of these are extremely wide and swathe the figure, being distinctly oriental.

There are also girdle-like draperies and vests, which often assume the girdle outline.

In extreme instances broad bands of fur will girdle the figure. The straight around belt is not seen, the girdles and sashes being of softly draped silks or other tissues.

Waistcoats Appeal to Feminine Favor.

Let no woman labor under the delusion that the new waistcoats which appeal so strongly to her fancy are easily copied. Although loose and baggy, they are carefully cut and fitted, and their edges are perfectly tailored.

Do you thoroughly understand the mysteries of tailor stitching, Mme. Thrifty? Think twice before you undertake a waistcoat unless you do; otherwise it may prove your Waterloo. If you are using a suiting material for the vest be sure to purchase enough material to make gaiter tops for the boots to be worn with the waistcoated tailored suit. Gaiters matching the walking skirt make the feet look small and smart.

MODISHNESS IN SILK VESTS.

A Cause For Thanks.

T. Suffern Tailer at a luncheon that he recently gave at the Newport casino was witty at the expense of the slashed skirt, the transparent blouse and other of woman's new fashions.

"Young Mrs. Blanc," a neighbor said to Mr. Tailer, "is a very beautiful woman, but she puts on airs."

"Well," said Mr. Tailer, "let us thank goodness that she puts on something! You know what the 1913 fashions are."

Dr. Burleson Arrives

A Very Natural Mistake

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Dr. Allen came into the living room, drawing on his driving gloves. He was an elderly man, hard driven by an extensive country practice, which he was about to share with an assistant from the city.

"I am called over to Ridgewood, Molly," he said to his plump little wife. "There's to be a consultation on the Travers case. Brown has telephoned for me. I may not return until late this evening."

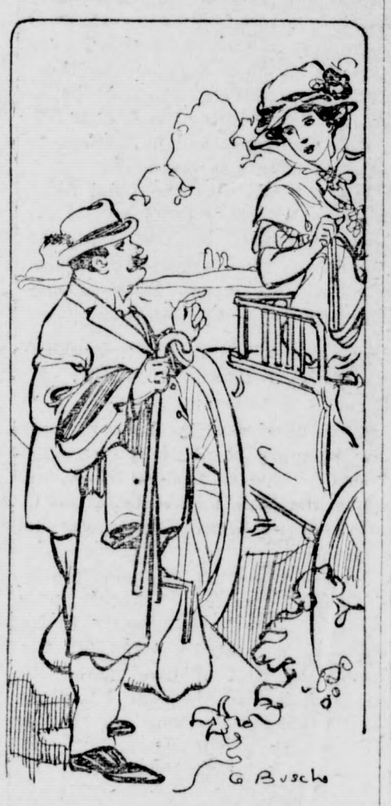
"Oh, dear!" sighed Mrs. Allen. "That is awkward—just when you are expecting Dr. Burleson. But he may not come today."

"I'm expecting a telegram any moment. He said he would wire just before he left. You have a room for him, dear?"

"Oh, yes, the chimney room. It's so cozy on these October evenings."

Della Allen looked up from her sewing with a mischievous smile crinkling her lips.

"Mother is spoiling him, dad, dear. She has hung new curtains in the chimney room, and she has picked out all the prettiest worked slippers and necktie holders and shaving paper balls that your lady invalids shower on you at Christmas and has adorned his room with them. Now, mother, you know you have!"



"THEY TELL ME YOU ARE FROM ALLEN'S."

Father and daughter laughed tenderly at the embarrassment of the dear little woman, who murmured something about "refined young men far away from their homes."

"Here comes Peter with the carriage," announced Della from the window, and she flew to tuck his medicine case into the buggy and receive his farewell kiss.

It was an hour later that the expected telegram arrived.

Della smoothed out the message and read scornfully:

Meet me at 3:12 train. Save best room for me. BURLESON.

"Why—why, what a singular message!" faltered Mrs. Allen, all her exalted ideas of the new assistant crumbling to dust.

Della laughed. "Well, mother, of course I will meet him. He must be rather amusing, to say the least. We won't worry father about Dr. Burleson's eccentricities. He will be disappointed."

Della Allen, very straight and slim in her scarlet coat and gray skirt, with scarlet feather in her gray hat, drove Dandy to the railroad station to meet the 3:12 train. As the rubber tired runabout wheeled around to a standstill at the platform the train rushed in with a roar of escaping steam and a thunder of wheels on the rails.

Then a high pitched, rather disagreeable voice sounded at Della's elbow.

"They tell me you are from Allen's," said the voice sharply.

"Dr. Burleson?" she asked crisply.

"Yes."

Della turned the carriage, and Dr. Burleson tossed a heavy suit case in the back and climbed to a seat beside her.

They drove in silence for some time.

"How's the old man?" he asked after awhile.

Della stiffened.

"You mean my father, of course," she said coldly. "He is very well, thank you. He was called to Ridgewood this morning. Otherwise he would have met you himself."

"Every cloud has a silver lining," he said with a laugh that was extremely unpleasant to Della Allen.

Della thought of the dainty chimney room, and she wondered what her mother would think of the guest for whom she had made such thoughtful preparations.

Dandy turned in at the open gateway and stopped before the door of the wing where her father's office was situated.

Mrs. Allen came into the porch, cordially smiling.

"Here is Dr. Burleson, mother," said Della dryly as the new assistant went up the steps with his suit case in hand. "I am very glad to see you," said Mrs. Allen, holding out her hand.

The physician gripped it in a large red paw.

"Pleased to meet you," he said rather awkwardly, and Della stared as he added in a businesslike tone: "I hope you saved a decent room for me. I wired Allen to that effect."

"I trust you will find it entirely comfortable," said Mrs. Allen haughtily, and she called Peter from the flower beds to conduct the doctor to his room.

Alone, the two women stared at each other.

"Mother, he will never do!" whispered Della.

"He is impossible," said Mrs. Allen with flashing eyes.

Della drove Dandy around to the barn and then returned to the house to find black Peter in earnest conversation with her mother. The old servitor was rubbing his woolly head in perplexity.

"Sho, Miss Molly, he am de contraptedest I eber seen," grumbled Peter. "Ses he, 'Bring me ice water, boy, an' is dey a drink in de house or am dis a temp'rance hotel?' an' when I tells him it ain't a saloon he asks, 'What kinda ranch am dis anyway?'"

Mrs. Allen's face was pale and red by turns.

"Is there anything else that Dr. Burleson wishes?" she asked.

"Yas'm, Miss Molly. Ses he, 'Take all dese yere dinglebats outer dis yere room,' an', yas'm, he flang all dese t'ings at my haid." Peter brought his hand from behind his back and displayed an orange colored shaving ball, a beribboned necktie holder, a fancy pincushion and a pair of worsted slippers.

"The man is intoxicated," said Della from the doorway, and just then Dr. Burleson's heavy step was heard in the hall. In a moment he appeared, looking at his watch.

"It's after 4, and I had a light lunch," he said briskly. "Just have cook fix up a steak for me. Some onions with it would go well. And a piece of apple pie, the kind mother used to make, eh? I'll go out to the stables and take a look at the horse." He nodded toward them, clapped his green hat on his head and left the house, sauntering slowly toward the barn.

Peter followed him, grumbling.

Mrs. Allen looked at Della and was about to speak when there came a ring at the doorbell.

Della answered it, looking singularly handsome, for her cheeks were flushed with anger and her eyes shining like stars.

On the doorstep stood a tall, slightly built young man, with eyeglasses astride his handsome nose. He was immaculately attired, and beside him on the porch were a leather suit case and a traveling bag.

"Dr. Allen?" he inquired, baring his head.

"I am sorry, but my father is away. He may not return until late this evening," returned Della. "Is there anything?"

"I am Dr. Burleson," explained the newcomer calmly.

"Dr. Burleson!" shrieked Della. "Why—why, pardon me, but we have been entertaining Dr. Burleson. Oh, there must be some mistake. Do come in and see mother."

So Della hustled the astonished young man into the living room and introduced him to her mother.

"I knew there was some awful mistake," said Mrs. Allen quietly as she shook hands with him.

The new Dr. Burleson displayed a letter from Dr. Allen, which fully identified him as the new assistant. Still, there was the man at the barn whom Peter reported as making a careful examination of Dandy and who was behaving in a very rude manner.

"Suppose I go out and interview this gentleman," suggested Dr. Burleson.

When Dr. Burleson returned from the barn it was with a smiling request for the first Dr. Burleson's baggage.

"He asks me to apologize for a mistake," said the young doctor.

"Now, do tell us all about it," said Mrs. Allen after the new assistant had returned for the second time, having escorted Dr. Burleson to the top of the hill and directed him to his proper destination.

Dr. Burleson laughed pleasantly.

"It appears that your visitor has a right to his professional title, but he happens to be a veterinary surgeon. He was called here to treat an animal belonging to Hosea Allen, proprietor of some big boarding house. Perhaps you know of the place?"

"Oh, yes—over near the bay," responded Mrs. Allen.

"He had never been here before and was surprised to find the boarding house conducted on such a small scale. It seems he wired Hosea Allen to have a room reserved for him, and at the station I believed he asked if there was a conveyance for Allen's, and they evidently pointed out your daughter."

"But your telegram?"

"My telegram? Oh, I never sent any, after all."

So the new assistant had a very informal introduction into his wife's family. Oh, yes, he fell in love with Della and married her, much to the delight of Dr. Allen and his wife. And Mrs. Allen often shudders and says:

"Just suppose the other Dr. Burleson had been the right one, Della!"

But Della only laughs and answers:

"Then you couldn't indulge in dingbats, mother, dear!"

THE MINARET GOWN.

Hoopla! The Hoopskirt Is With Us Once More.

PAUL POIRET'S FAMOUS CREATION.

This is the minaret gown that Paul Poiret, the famous Parisian dressmaker, wishes womankind to adopt as the 1913-14 style of costume. The tunic of transparent stuff is wired with a hoop, and the lines of the figure show through. In great contrast is the narrowness of the skirt, which can be seen through the tunic and tapers to the feet.

In spite of the odd appearance of the gown as it first comes into the line of vision, the designers say that there are indeniably sauciness and chic about it which will appeal to most women.

Prospective Sons-in-law.

"How much do most mothers know of the men their daughters finally marry?" asks a contributor to the Woman's Home Companion. "And how much real friendship and trust are there usually between young men and the mothers of the girls the young men choose to marry? Yet I do not as a general rule count this to be the fault of the young men. The mothers are older and wiser—should be wiser at least in all such matters—yet they are generally slow to speak of them or share in them, whether from shyness or jealousy or inability to express themselves or a forgetfulness of the years when they, too, were young.

"The mother who does not think herself wiser in all these matters than her daughter is rare to find. Yet there are not so many mothers who are consciously helping (fitting would be the better word) their daughters to make a wise and rational choice. Perhaps most mothers have a hope that when the time comes they may be allowed to choose for these daughters of theirs, and they fail to realize that almost their whole duty lies in fitting them to choose for themselves."

Malines Frills For Plain Frocks.

Provided they can be kept fresh looking, there is no easier way of dressing up the plain little frock in serge or dark silk which nearly every girl has for early autumn wear than a wrist, neck and plastron set in white malines. The wristlets are merely very full three inch wide frills, shirred on to narrow ribbons, by which they may be attached to cuffless sleeves, and the collar consists of two frills—one of three inch width overlapping one of four inch—at the center of the back. There they are wired to stand up, whence they taper gradually to beneath the chin, where they lie flat and are secured under a narrow velvet pump bow. The plastron is a bib shaped affair of finely tucked malines extending from the shoulders to below the bust and further lengthened and widened by a three inch frilling.

A Stenciling Hint.

Few people realize that scrim curtains should always be stenciled on the wrong side. These curtains, done in the pale roses, blues or greens, add considerably to the beauty of a bedroom, and the ones done in the darker tones are quite suitable for living rooms. However, when they are done on the right side and hung at a window the outside or wrong side is without design, while if the stenciled side is hung next to the window the light shining through the curtains gives the effect of having been stenciled on both sides. Many people use the scrim curtains for boudoir of bedroom during the entire winter.

Uses Time Well.

A young business woman who works until 4 o'clock each afternoon passes one afternoon a week from 4 until 6 at a public library reading the current magazines and "keeping posted," as she puts it. Nothing is allowed to interfere with this standing engagement, and the girl who has tried declares that it is really quite remarkable what a lot of reading one can get into two hours a week when it is done regularly.

Milady's Mirror

How to Cure Wrinkles.

There are other signs more subtle and potent, but wrinkles are the most pathetic because the most telltale indications of age. The lines and furrows they see disfiguring the faces of women of middle age ought to make girls do everything in their power to ward off wrinkles as long as possible.

Most muscles of the face are voluntary, responding to every passing emotion, and if the muscles are constantly kept at work, as in grimacing and with odd tricks of expression habitual with so many women, that lines, then wrinkles, will be fostered.

Even children should learn that the face should be kept in repose. The little lines around the eyes and the long "parentheses" that inclose the lips and mouth and that are excused on the ground that they are necessary to expression, "laughing wrinkles," as they are called, in reality add years to one's appearance, so there is no need to fear massage will take away the expression of the face.

The little vertical lines that so quickly appear between the eyes as a result of squinting or that are often assumed in deep thought give one a fierce, rat-like expression, and only by the greatest care can the habit be overcome.

Another wrinkle maker is the habit of lifting the eyebrows. Tiny lines grow and deepen just above the eyes, and great furrows soon mar the beauty of the forehead.

There are some lotions that are said to prevent and others to erase wrinkles and which, if not entirely efficacious, are harmless.

One of the preventives is made as follows: Boil three ounces of pearl barley in a pint of water till the gluten is extracted. Strain, add thirty drops of tincture of benzoin and use as a face wash night and morning.

If the wrinkles have shown themselves bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving sixty grains of alum in six ounces of rosewater and pour gently into one and one-half ounces of almond milk, stirring all the while.

Slit Skirt and Woolen Hose.

What a cruel alternative is put to the slit skirt wearers by Surgeon General Rupert Blue! He is quoted as saying that when the chilly winds of winter begin to blow the women will either have to sew up the slits in their skirts or wear heavy woolen stockings and sensible boots!

"Nearly all the women who affect slit skirts wear the thinnest kind of silk stockings and extremely low slippers," he is said to have observed. "If they wish to avoid catching their death of cold they ought to wear thick woolen stockings, as their grandmothers did, or sew up the vents."

When the dictum of Dr. Blue was repeated to a well known fashion authority she shrugged her shoulders and said: "I'm afraid they'll catch their death of cold then. But it isn't only the skirts that should cause the surgeon general to worry about women's health. If one wishes to be fashionable this winter she will have to freeze.

"Blouses expose the throat, skirts expose the ankles, and some of the new crownless hats expose the head. Women can be induced to wear fur about their throats, but I'm afraid fur anklets would not meet with much success, and woolen stockings—oh, never!

"And," with a twinkle, "think what an advertising feature would be lost if women decided to take Dr. Blue's advice. There is a certain kind of small shopkeeper who attracts attention to his window displays by posting in a prominent place a photograph of a woman in a slit or diaphanous skirt. He is sure to draw a crowd—of men.

"Of course," more seriously, "that practice is really deplorable, and the right kind of man is no more attracted to the shop by it than the right kind of woman is by the extremes of fashion. It's undoubtedly true, however, that there are a number of women who ought to pay heed to Dr. Blue's warning and sacrifice a little of their ambition to be ultra fashionable to the consideration of their health."

The Daily Bath.

A help in restoring the skin after a strenuous week or two or month of outing is the daily allover scrub. It is not necessary to get into a big tub filled with water and lie in it any length of time. Much better is it to take the thorough soaping and rubbing at night, then removing every particle of soap with a spray, first tepid, then cold. The morning bath may be only a five minute splash in water with the chill barely taken off and as cold as it comes from the faucet for the spraying.

A healthy tingle follows such a bath, with renewed vitality and a glow of skin that shows how beneficial it is. For some a very cold bath is best; for the majority the water should be tepid or blood heat, just so it feels pleasant to the body. Hot baths should only be taken by advice of a physician. They are enervating and cause lassitude, besides being conducive to a habit of taking cold in the slightest draft. By the end of one month the girl who has almost despaired on viewing the ravages of her summer trip may find herself better in every way—healthier, prettier, fresher and showing the benefits for which she thought she had paid too dearly.

Lady Mary Greville, Who Is Kind to Animals.

© by American Press Association.

Little Lady Mary Greville, the demure maiden pictured, is shown distributing catalogues at the entrance to the "country fair in aid of our dumb friends," which was recently held in a London suburb. As its name indicates, the fair is given to raise funds to help animals. In a great city like London there are always large numbers of stray cats and dogs wandering about without means of subsistence except what they may pick up in the streets. It is to help these poor unfortunate beasts that the Dumb Animal society was organized and is maintained.

Lady Mary takes a great interest in the society and its work, as she is very fond of animals. Most children like animals, but they are often careless and sometimes abuse them, unthinkingly perhaps, but the poor creatures suffer just the same. It is the mark of gentle breeding and a sweet disposition to treat our dumb friends with kindness.

A Little Story.

On her birthday a great duchess called her little grandsons to her and told them a story of a Roman emperor who made it a rule that no one should leave him in a sorrowful frame of mind.

"One day," said the duchess, "the emperor was very busy with his own affairs, and so the day passed and he had done no good to others. When evening came he grew sad, and, sighing, he exclaimed: 'My friends, I have lost a day! I have neglected my fellow men.'"

When the duchess had finished her story she sent the two grandsons out to play. At the palace gate a poor woman spoke to them.

"My good gentlemen," she said, "won't you assist me? I am poor and have had all sorts of misfortune."

Ernest ran on to his play, but Albert, touched by the old woman's plea and remembering his grandmother's story, gave the poor old soul a coin.

"Now I have not wasted my day," he thought as he ran to join his brother.

That boy was Prince Albert, Queen Victoria's consort.

Concerning Nails.

All of you have heard of fourpenny nails, sixpenny nails, etc. The suffix penny in this connection does not mean penny, but is a corruption of the word pound.

When we speak of a fourpenny nail we mean nails of such a size that a thousand of them will weigh four pounds. An eightpenny nail weighs eight pounds a thousand, and so on. It is an old English term, and its original form was "four pound," "eight pound," "ten pound," etc. Carpenters and other artisans got into the way of slurring over these terms and pronouncing them fourpen, sixpen, etc., and this corruption in turn was modified by turning the shortened suffix pen into penny, and so it stands today, a clear case of turning a pound into a penny.

The Useful Pin.

We are so used to having the handy pin around while sewing and dressing that we can scarcely imagine how the ancients ever got along without this article. Yet they did, for it was only at the end of the seventeenth century that the modern pin was invented. After that time the pinmaker was allowed to sell pins openly only on Jan. 1 and 2, so that court ladies and fashionable dames alike were obliged to buy a large store on those days.

The Dancing Lesson.

Now, Miss Clara, point your toe.
Look at me and point it so.
You know, my dear, I learned to dance
In that graceful country, France,
And, having been so nicely taught,
I move, of course, as a lady ought.
And only think how grand 'twill be
To have it said you dance like me!
So now, Miss Clara, point your toe.
Look at me and point it so.

About Queer Birds.

One of the most singular of birds is the chanting hawk. The sexes pair for life. During incubation the male turns musician and sings by day and night. Each strain occupies about a minute, when he pauses for a time, then begins again. He is so absorbed while singing that he may be approached, though at other times exceedingly shy.

Levaillant having killed a male bird, the female searched for him on all sides, uttering piteous cries. In another case, having killed a female, the husband mounted to the tops of the trees and poured out a mingled strain of lamentation and defiance.

The crowned eagle of Brazil is said to be the only bird that ventures to dine on skunks. It devours the armadillos, breaking their shells by carrying them high in the air and letting them fall upon the earth.

When flying, the buffoon eagle has the appearance of a bird with the tail cut off. Its name is given from its habit of tubling like a buffoon in the air.

The condor has been known to soar to an elevation almost six times greater than that at which the clouds are ordinarily suspended over our heads.

A Fox Tragedy.

On one of the large estates in Hingham, England, a few weeks ago a fox was found to be destroying poultry. The time of the raids and their boldness were proof enough that the fox must be a female with young. Poisoned meat was prepared for her, and at once the raids ceased. A few days later one of the workmen of the estate came upon the den of a fox, at the mouth of which lay dead a whole litter of young ones. They had been poisoned. The mother had not eaten the doctored food herself, but had carried it home to her family. They must have died in the burrow, for it was evident from the signs that she had dragged them out into the fresh air to revive them and deposited them gently on the sand by the hole. Then in her perplexity she had brought various tidbits of mouse and bird and rabbit and placed at their noses to tempt them to wake up out of their strange sleep and eat as hungry children ought to eat. Who knows how long she watched beside the still forms and what her emotions were? She must have left the neighborhood soon after, however, for no one has seen her since about the estate.—Atlantic Monthly.

A Plant's Drink.

When we cut flowers we put them in water to keep them fresh. Like human beings, they can exist for long periods on water alone, as the liquid forms a considerable portion of their bulk. The drinking capabilities of plants vary a great deal, and at a recent scientific exhibition held at Surbiton, England, some ingenious devices were shown to register the different actions of plant life. The apparatus consists of a twin glass tube with a coiled formation at the base. The flower is placed through a cork into the water in the upper end of the branch tube, and the lower end, which is inserted in a vessel filled with water, is lifted out and replaced, thus allowing an air bubble to enter the tube. As the plant drinks the water the bubble is forced along the coiled glass tube as fresh water enters behind it, and the amount taken by the flower is, of course, the quantity behind the air globe.

Conundrums.

What is it that we often tell others to do and cannot do ourselves? Stop a minute.

What contains more feet in winter than in summer? An ice skating rink.

Why is an egg like a colt? Because it isn't fit for use until it is broken.

When is a wall like a fish? When it is scaled.

What is the difference between a dollar bill and a silver half dollar? Fifty cents, you boob.

What is the best thing to do in a hurry? Nothing.

The Lone Fisherman.

This is a variation of the donkey party. A square of muslin upon which is drawn or pasted a fisherman with rod and line in hand is fastened against the wall at one side of the room.

A fish made of crape paper, with a pin stuck through its gills, is given to each player, and one by one they are blindfolded and told to attach the fish to the hook on the fisherman's line. The one who comes nearest to doing this receives a prize.

Word Puzzle.

A word of four letters signifies something made of glass. With seven different initials in succession, make a weather indicator, a country road, trouble, something used by the lame, part of a lion, a temple, an inhabitant of a European country.

Answer.—Pane, vane, lane, bane, cane, mane, fane, Dane.

The Rabbit.

There was a little rabbit sprig,
Which, being little, was not big.
He always walked upon his feet
And never fasted when he eat.
When from a place he ran away
He never at that place did stay.
And when he ran, as I am told,
He ne'er stood still for young or old.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Don't Forget World's Series Stars of Past.

Photos by American Press Association.

BEDIENT AND HERZOG.

Baseball fans are often forgetful of the heroes of the past, and sometimes it is well to jog their memories a bit. During all the world's series baseball talk we have heard of late very little has been said about the great players who were the bright particular stars of the important contests.

A year ago, for instance, Pitcher Bedient of the Boston Red Sox was the lion of the hour, as it was his twirling that enabled Jake Stahl's bean eaters to defeat the New York Giants, and in the same series Charley Herzog electrified the country by his fielding, base running and batting. The year before "Home Run" Baker broke into immortal fame by pounding Marquard and Mathewson for home runs.

And the great performances of "Babe" Adams, Billy Dineen, Bender, Mathewson, Big Ed Walsh, etc., in other years? They should never be forgotten.

In passing it may be observed that it is getting to be a familiar sight to see Mathewson and Bender "hooked up" against one another in world's series contests, this year being the third that the fates marked them as leading actors in the championship drama.

Americans Win Trophy.

The United States team won the Palma match in the international rifle tournament at Camp Perry, O. The score was 1,714. The team from the Argentine Republic was second, with a score of 1,684, nine points ahead of Canada. Sweden made 1,484 and Peru 1,465.

The shooting was on the 800, 900 and 1,000 yard ranges. The scores are considered good, as a strong north wind blew in the faces of the shooters. The winning score was six points below that made by the United States team last year when it captured the prize in Canada.

Cantwell's Bad Luck.

Pitcher Cantwell, the Chicago high school player, who set the Wisconsin-Illinois league afire by his brilliant work early in the season on the Oshkosh team, was recently paid off and probably will never pitch again. Cantwell sustained an injury to his pitching arm on July 4. Blood poisoning set in, and a long rest failed to bring back his former ability. Before his injury he had performed in twenty-one games, winning fifteen. Cantwell will return next season and try for an outfield position. He was the mainstay of the pitching staff.

Another Felton.

Con Felton, fresh from a summer of football training under the tutelage of his brother, Sam, the Harvard star, who utilized the fadeaway for punting last season, has failed to find a place among the thirty-six players selected by Coach Haughton for his varsity squad.

Felton had a slight chance of boring his way into that select coterie, however, as Coach Leary is somewhat peeved because he has only seven ends under his wing and has asked that he be allowed another.

Travers Going Abroad.

Jerome D. Travers, the national amateur golf champion, has announced his intention of visiting England next year in another try for the coveted amateur title of the British isles.

Two or three years ago the Upper Montclair wizard made an attempt to win foreign honors and, like nearly all the other Americans, failed.

Ryan May "Come Back."

Tommy Ryan, the ex-welterweight boxing champion, is going to open a boxing club in Syracuse and is also thinking of again entering the ring. He has trained down to 155 pounds and figures that by November or December he will be in shape to fight some of the so called champions.

DALY CITY, CALIFORNIA, OCTOBER 17, 1913

RECORDS OF CALIFORNIA LEGISLATORS

A copy of the "Labor Record of Senators and Assemblymen" for the Fortieth Session of the California Legislature, issued by the California State Federation of Labor, has been received by the Record. It gives the votes of every Senator on 29 "labor measures" which came before that body, and the votes of every Assemblyman on 23 "labor measures."

Party affiliation evidently had nothing to do with the attitude of Legislators toward Labor, Democrats and Republicans alike being among those who cast "good" or "bad" votes from Labor's point of view, though the only Socialist member of the Legislature, Assemblyman C. W. Kingsley of Los Angeles has a perfect csore, as has also Assemblyman Wm. B. Bush, Republican, of San Francisco. All other members of the Legislature either voted "bad" on some measure or were absent on one or more roll-calls. Senator J. C. Owens of the Ninth district (Marin and Contra Costa) was the worst offender, casting only one "good" vote and being absent on 17 roll-calls. Having made copious pre-electon promises of "friendship for labor," and running as a labor candidate, he has proven himself champion double-crosser. Is it any wonder that organized labor of his district has invoked the recall against him?

This Labor Record should be a useful guide to union members and their friends in the next election, when many of these men will be candidates for re-election.

A CALL TO ARMS

General William Rantoff Hearst has declared war on Mexico again.

This step has been delayed until he could conclude an offensive (to the public) and defensive (of his Mexican holding) alliance with Colonel Toothfelt, late of the Rough Riders and later of the Army of Armageddon.

It is not yet announced that either will lead the invading army in person, but we are assured that both will make a great demonstration of noise, as usual. As the Colonel is on his way to South America to tell our neighbors of his greatness, he will probably have a good excuse for running out.

It is not known whether General Grey Hair Otis of the Los Angeles Times will offer his services in defense of his Mexican ranch, but his well known patriotic love of his property will, doubtless, overcome his gout and he will be found directing double-leaded, blackface charges against the enemy.

The improvements resulting from the voting of the bonds next Tuesday, October 14, will make San Mateo a better place to live in. Vote for all the bonds.

Every once in a while a judge runs amuck, like Judge Humphries of Seattle. Shouldn't there be some punishment prescribed by law for a court being in contempt of the people?

If reports emanating from San Jose to the effect that prunes have joined the high-cost-of-living brigade be true, it may be that the "boardig-house prune" will cease to be a joke.

Bond issues will not prevent the starting of fires, but the increased efficiency in fire-fighting which will result from a central fire station and more bridges, so that San Mateo creek will not be an obstacle in the way of reaching fires will be worth more than it will cost the taxpayers. Vote for all the bonds.

The California Delta Association has launched a campaign for the formation of a new county to include the "island country" in Sacramento, San Joaquin, Solano and Contra Costa couties. We don't know where the county seat will located, but we'll bet the Byron Times is already the official newspaper.

With the last issue of the Half Moon Bay Review, Brother H. E. Griffiths, its editor and proprietor for several years, laid down the editorial pen and bade a fond adieu to his many friends in that beautiful little Coastside city. His successor, R. A. Bergthold, has for seven years been the guiding light of the Fort Bragg Chronicle and the Pittsburg Post, successively. Our best wishes to Griffiths and a glad welcome to Bergthold.

SAN MATEO COUNTY TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

Pedagogues Enjoy Outing as Well as "Talk Shop"

The San Mateo County Teacher's Institute which convened at Half Moon Bay this week was one of the very best ever held in the county. The teachers were attentive and took in all of the discussions. The lecturers gave interesting and instructive advice and the musical talent displayed by the teachers was of the highest order.

The teachers began to arrive on Sunday and a number came over the mountains in autos. When Roy W. Cloud, county superintendent, called to order Monday morning, all teachers were present but two who soon afterwards arrived.

The session commenced with singing of America and was followed by a most pleasing address of welcome by Dr. Morgan. W. J. Savage, the supervising principal of the Jefferson District, responded in a most feeling manner, after which the educators went into the sections at the High School and heard and talked over numerous subjects which were of great professional interest. In the afternoon B. L. Lick, secretary of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition Lecture Bureau, gave one of the most instructive lectures ever heard in the country, illustrating his remarks by beautifully tinted lantern slides and moving pictures of beauty spots in California and of the workings and surroundings of the Panama Canal. In the evening the people of Half Moon Bay extended their welcome in the shaype of a reception and dance at the I. D. E. S. Hall and big, genia Phhilip Gonzales acted as floor manager. To say that the teachers enjoyed themselves is expressing it mildly.

Tuesday's session began at 8:30 and consisted of round table talks by the high school teachers, a talk on teaching music by O. M. Carrington and a discussion of the course of study lead by Mr. Cloud.

At 11:45 the meeting was adjourned and all of the teachers were taken by waiting automobiles to Princeton Hotel, where they enjoyed probably the most enjoyable feature of the convention, a genuine old-fashioned barbecue. Here, in prodigal manner, huge steaks and juicy roasts were turned and cooked to the queen's taste, and the grown-up boys and girls were as happy as children when they were served and served and served with everything that was good. After a hearty expression of thanks was given by Superintendent Cloud, the afternoon was enjoyed on the beach or in auto rides through the hills to Marine View, Moss Beach, Farralon and Montara. In the evening a musicale was held at I. D. E. S. Hall.

On Wednesday the session was called to order at 9 o'clock and the regular program observed. At the business session it was practically decided that the next institute be a joint session with Santa Clara county at San Jose. The last part of the program was an illustrated lecture on the Old World and its ways by W. G. Hartranft of San Francisco. This lecture was much enjoyed. At 3:15 the teachers left for the train, refreshed and happy after their three days of meeting.

The work and solos of the musical director, O. M. Carrington, were appreciated.

Every teacher and others present expressed their appreciation of the right royal treatment accorded them by the soastside people and each one expressed the wish that another institute might be held at Half Moon Bay.

Too much credit for the success of the institute cannot be given to the committee consisting of Dr. C. L. Morgan, Alvin S. Hatch, A. M. Croop and Joseph M. Quinlan, and to the efficient work of the Half Moon Bay teachers who were ably guided by Prof. Croop.

The committee on resolutions expressed the hearty approval of all work done by the citizens of Half Moon Bay, after which the institute was adjourned.—Coast Side Comet.

SAN BRUNO ITEMS

C. W. Butler, representing the engineering department of the Railroad Commission, has looked over the ground to decide the future location of the San Bruno depot.

P. J. Sullivan went to Santa Clara valley last week to lay in a large supply of wine for the coming year.

George Buckingham and mother have just returned from a trip to their old home in Indiana. They report having the time of their lives.

J. Gonzinski of the Third Addition lost his home by fire last week. It was a total loss, with an insurance of $1000.

Miss Linsay, a successful home-builder of Lomita Park, will soon take a pleasure trip to Honolulu.

Henry Ward Brown, our successful political representative of Colma, presented the writer with a rare volume, the California Blue Book, which is much appreciated. Mr. Brown's kindness is only exceeded by his usefulness as a well-tried Assemblyman of this county for the past 16 years. Thanks, Mr. Brown.

A drunken auto driver ran into both of the gates at the San Bruno crossing Sunday, destroying them.

The San Bruno Water Company had to turn off the water Tuesday to repair he pumps.

The petition filed with the Railroad Commission for the removal of the San Bruno depot to a safer location was answered by a proposal by the Southern Pacific that they were willing to build a temporary shed that would answer for another 30 or 40 years, but we will not be put off. We want a new depot built away from that dangerous curve, or destroy the present one and stop all trains near San Bruno crossing.

Mrs. Hensley was visiting her brother, A. T. Green, Wednesday.

Mrs. Petterson visited the Land Show in San Francisco Tuesday and was well pleased wth the exhibit.

Henry Spaulding was a guest of the San Mateo county exhibit at the Land Show Tuesday.

Mrs. Smith of Daly City visited San Bruno on business this week.

Mrs. Jack Osment, living on the State Highway, was near death's door Tuesday near "death curve" on the Southern Pacific while waiting for a train.

Hyde Green and family are going to San Pedro for Mrs. Green's health.

J. J. Jones and family were visiting in the city Monday, setting a good example for other married couples.

The Tattler's grand prize masquerade ball at Knowles' Hall, Saturday evening, November 15, is for a most worthy cause and should receive the hearty support of every citizen of Daly City. Robbie Behre's great affliction does not take from him any of the characteristics that go to prove his moral worth or blight in the least his remarkably cheery disposition.

The new Presbyterian Church, corner of Green avenue and Hanover street, is rapidly nearing completion and will be an attractive improvement to that part of Daly City. The pastor, Rev. P. R. Dickie, is an earnest worker, a talented talker and has gained the sincere respect of every member of his congregation. This beautiful new edifice, which will cost about $3500, is mostly the result of his untiring energy and it is no wonder he is quite proud of the achievement.

JUDGE CABANISS BARS WOMEN FROM JURY DUTY

Overrules Precedents Established by Judge Buck

Holding that under the present laws women cannot serve on juries, Judge George Cabaniss of San Francisco completely upset the precedents established by Judge George H. Buck, in whose court he is sitting, and refused to allow women to be jurors in the trial of the Coburn case, which started Tuesday.

The long legal battle which started this week is the third fight waged by Loren Coburn, the octogenarian land owner of Pescadero, to be allowed to handle the affairs of his $1,500,000 estate. The aged millionaire, who is now in his eighty-seventh year, was declared incompetent by the courts four years ago. He appealed the case and was granted a new trial, at which he was again declared incompetent. He has now brought an action to have his competency restored.

An array of legal talent represents both Coburn and M. J. Hynes, his guardian and administrator of the estate, who is opposing the action.

When Mrs. Catherine Green of Daly City was examined Tuesday morning Judge Cabaniss made his ruling that women would not be allowed to serve unless both counsel stipulated. Attorneys for the guardian objected and he excused Mrs. Green, Miss Julia Iago of South San Francisco and Mrs. Ella Talcott of Daly City, the three women on the venire, from further service.

BELIEVES HUSBAND HAS ELOPED WITH AFFINITY

Mrs. Otto Zoellnar Charges Spouse With Abandonment

The long arm of the law is after Otto Zoellnar, who disappeared about two weeks ago. Last Friday Mrs. Zoellnar swore to a complaint before Justice of the Peace McCormick, charging her husband with abandonment and neglect of his wife. She believes he has eloped to Honolulu with Herthe Mehrstedt, a young Oakland woman, whose strange disappearance has baffled the policce.

Mrs. Zoellnar says that her husband quit his job at the San Mateo Plaining Mill, where he was employed as a cabinetmaker, and told her that he had been discharged and was going to Bay Point to work and that she should follow as soon as he got located. He asked her if she had any money, saying he would need some for his board until he got paid, and she gave him all she had. He also collected money due them on some Richmond property, leaving his wife practically penniless.

A letter said to have been written by the Mehrstedt girl to Zoellnar came into the hands of Mrs. Zoellnar. It had been sent to the planing mill, but as Zoellnar was not there it was delivered at the family home on Fourth avenue. This epistle, which was rather lenghty, told of the love of its writer for Zoellnar. It was signed simply "H," but Mrs. Zoellnar identified the handwriting as that of Miss Mehrstedt, whom she says was a frequent visitor at their home in Alameda, where they lived prior to coming to San Mateo a short time ago. This love letter decided Mrs. Zoellnar in her course and she at once sought the aid of the law.

Constable M. Sheehan has sent out circulars giving a description of Zoellnar to all parts of the State and the authorities at Honolulu have been notified.—San Mateo Index.

STATE HIGHWAY KNOCKERS

It is unfortunate that some people will lend themselves to "knocking," when they are not in a position to know whereof thy speak. Take for instance, the alleged report of the poorness of the State Highway between Hopland and Cloverdale, regarding which the Ukiah Dispatch-Democrat is quoted as saying: "It begins to look as if the people of Mendocino county had been jobbed and it would have been better to have let the State Highway go somewhere else." It is a pity that a San Mateo paper should circulate such a silly story, when the fact is, the first contract of the State Highway was constructed between Baden and Burlingame, which is unquestionably one of the finest pieces of road in the United States, yet the San Francisco Chronicle recently stated that it was in a most deplorable condition. Probably this alleged Mendocino county story has about the same reliability. The Chronicle had a grouch then because the $3,500,000 municipal railway bonds had carried, and the Ukiah paper is grouching because the State Highway was not built to suit Ukiah.

☞ Those sending in local items will greatly increase the interest by giving the initials of people mentioned and at the same time be more satisfactory to them.

DOUBLING DALY CITY TAX VALUATIONS

Communication Defending Record's Criticism on the Tax Raising Outrage With Figures and Facts

Daly City, Cal., Oct. 13, 1913

Mr. Daly City Editor:—

Kindly publish the following in the interest of Daly City taxpayers:—

The Record has been accused of juggling the facts concerning the new tax levy for Daly City, and as a taxpayer who has no interest whatever in the Record's controversies, I believe it the duty of all to well consider that it is the Record which is close to the naked truth in matters of taxation and the competency of the much advertised trio, chosen by us on account, as generally supposed, of being well-posted in economics, and having the solution for all ills at the tips of their fingers, and upon their most sacred promise to the people of Daly City to reduce the taxes and to apply the true philosophy of Karl Marx.

You and I know how they do it.

The words "general incompetency" could be well applied to them, if you and I do not desire to go behind the scenes and dig up the bottom of the true state of affairs.

Now, let us stick strictly to taxes and see if our city fathers have acted according to their promises. „

A business man making the budget for Daly City would consider as follows:

First—How much money is needed for 1913-14 to cover all expenses without hardship on the taxpayers?

Second—Knowing the valuation of property to be $1,300,000, how high should the tax rate be? He would discover the following:

Special Funds
Interest on bonds	$ 5,500
Sinking fund	3,000
Street lighting	3,000
General Expenses
Marshal's salary	900
Clerk' salary	480
City Attorney	600
Treasurer's salary	300
Street sprinkling	1,000
Incidentals	1,720
The income from saloon and special licenses is	4,100
Total	16,500
So it would be necessary to raise the balance from the general taxation	12,400

As we are assessed at $1,300,000, we can see that a tax rate of $1 on $100 would be sufficient.

To have a better illustration of low taxation under our famous so-called Socialist administration, we will compare the following: The real estate on which last year were paid city taxes, say, $5, this year for this same property you will pay $14.20, or an increase of $9.20, which is close to 300 per cent. Are you pleased with it? If so, glorify them; if not, pay your taxes only under written protest stating your reasons. and for what purposes do they try to collect about $8000 more, which is the difference between the tax rate of $1 and the $1.42 set by the board. They will collect about as follows:

Saloon and special licenses	$ 4,100
Taxes	18,460
$1.42 taxation total	22,560
$1.00 taxation	13,000
Excess	8,440

The following suggessted explanation may contain the truth: The so-called Socialist trio realize that they did not live up to their promise to the people of Daly City. Neither have they been faithful to the Socialist philosophy. And to perpetuate themselves as city fathers next April they have got to do something desperate, and it costs money, and, as the taypayers' money is the handiest thing in the world to spend on political purposes, that votes are going to be bought next winter in the shape of giving work or anything in Daly City to those voters whom they intend to catch. Those things are practiced often, and why not by our political economists?

Of course, the question arises: Are you people of Daly City satisfied with such a state of affairs? If you are. and it suits you, surely it will not bankrupt the humble writer.

Hoping to see brighter days for Daly City, which can only be accomplished by ourselves choosing men without any strings on them and men who will consider the people first and B., L. and me-too last.

Respectfully submitted,
J. F. PANKEWICZ.

DALY CITY DADS

Good Business Meeting---Board of Health To Be Created---Glerk Makes His Tardy Report---Bond Experts Selected---Telephones and Gas---Mission St. Fixing.

Monday being a legal holiday, only Freyer, Biebel and Landini were present. Mr. Freyer called to order, whereupon a motion was made and carried to adjourn until the following evening.

Tuesday evening all members were present except Trustee Green.

Mr. Freyer, reporting on the road committee, stated that his attention had been called many times to the driving of teams across our sidewalks, badly demolishing them and in one instance a fence had been torn down to enable teams with heavy wagons to cross the walks. He said that the State Highway engineer had suggested that sprinkling on Mission should be done mornings and evenings and not in the middle of the day.

Mrs. Celia Bracken applied for and was granted dance hall license. Marshal Lucy stated that he had been assured that no tough dancing would be permitted.

Miss Julia Donovan, 115 Green avenue, asked for the transfer of her merchant's liquor license to A. A. Hines, her sucessor in business.

Mrs. Otto Gross applied for merchant's liquor license for her new store at 325 Green avenue and the same was granted.

A communication was read from Ira Gross, secretary of the StateCompensation Ins. Association, and clerk was instructed to write for particulars, rates, etc.

Communication from Mr. Merrigan, asking that his name be withdrawn from curbing petition. Filed.

Communication from State Board of Health calling attention to state law requiring local health boards in municipalities. Referred to Attorney Morris and was instructed to frame health ordinance.

Monthly report of officers.

City Clerk made the delayed report on financial condition of the city on June 30, 1913, but the same has not been advertised as the law requires.

City Attorney Morris stated that before the bonds could be sold, their legality must be passed upon by a responsible firm, suggesting that the law firm of Goodfellow, Eells & Orrick of San Francisco were the leading bond experts of the city and that their fee would be $100. After some discussion, Mr. Morris was authorized to employ them to pass on the bonds.

Mr. Levy, of the firm of Glucksman & Levy, was present and protested against the raise of his taxes in Concordia Homestead. It was decided that the board meet in an adjourned meeting next Monday night to pass on these protests.

A special meeting was also arranged for the citizens of Hillcrest to discuss water situation at city hall, Sunday at 9 a. m.

Clerk Smith stated that S. P. refused to put in turnstyle on Knowles avenue. Referred to city attorney

More complaints were made of Bloom. E. R. Poor stated that he had paid up his water bill to April 1, when Bloom demanded that he put in a meter at a cost of $15, which was refused by Mrs. Poor, whereupon Bloom's man immediately cut off their water pipes.

Mr. Morris stated that the telephone company had assured him that they would eliminate the "mileage" charge and put in the asked-for local exchange station. Of the gas company, he recommended that a franchise be granted, but advised everybody not to sign any contracts with the company for any stated rates, for they will not be permitted to benefit by rates that the railroad commission may fix.

A number of citizens requested permission to connect their sewer pipes at a manhole on Guadaloupe street and the same was granted

Under "Rule 9" the editor of the Record was given the floor to speak on the matter of the improvement of Mission Road, with sidewalks, granite curbs and the three-foot strip on either side. He spoke of the petition presented some itme ago, requesting the board to have the work all done uniformly and under the provisions of the 1911 Improvement Act, which the board had accepted and laid the matter over for action until the State Highway is completed, for the reasons that the grades would then be all established and that nothing would be needed only to prepare plans and specifications and otherwise proceed under the 1911 Improvement Act. His particular contention was that some one was signing up people for the installation of curbing and in some places walks, and that same was injudicious and would tend to botch up the improvement of the street and would undoubtedly result in the street being left botched up for ten years to come, whereas, if the whole work should be done under the 1911 Improvement Act, all would be finished in a comparatively short time and result in untold benefit, not only to Mission Road property owners, but to the entire City of Daly City. W. N. Flaherty, whom it developed was interested in the present piecemeal scheme, vigorously contended that it would be impossible to do the work under the 1911 Improvement Act, that he knew positively. Brown simply asked the city attorney, who asked Flaherty "why the law could not be applied in Daly City?" It was an unanswerable stunner, and then R. R. Castle spoke in support of the 1911 Improvement Act, as did Trustees Freyer and Ross and F. A. Hansen. Mr. Ross stated that he will not take sides with any contractors and only the full interests of the people will be considered when the time comes for action. His remarks had a true ring to them, and will no doubt be a potent factor in securing this most important improvement, an improvement that when the street is completed on the lines desired in the original petition, the adjacent streets will rapidly follow in the elegant work, and the writer hopes that Theta avenue will be the first one,

Gust Johnson asked that Park avenue be looked after and was told that already rock was being hauled to that street.

Treasurer Sheehan made a nice "spooch" urging the installation of gas—the very idea that a real estate agent should ask for more "gas."

The bills were then allowed and the meeting adjourned.

Woman's World

Miss Benton First Dining Car Conductor.

MISS CAROLYN MARIA BENTON.

Shuttling back and forth in a railroad train, keeping passengers in good humor and advising the traveler ignorant as to what to eat while a train is running sixty miles an hour, Miss Carolyn Maria Benton of Cincinnati, the first woman dining car conductor in America, happily earns her daily bread. She likes the work.

Miss Benton, who directs the buffet car which is operated by the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railway between Cincinnati and Dayton, was put in the place as an experiment. Now she is a fixture, and the railroad is looking for more efficient young women who can run diners.

"It means application, attention, tact and diplomacy to run a dining car," said Miss Benton. "I do not believe there will be many women dining car conductors. They cannot stand the work. There is too much rush, and the constant traveling is hard on the nerves. Men stand the work better, but I don't think they can do the work better than a woman.

"Every morning I start at 11 o'clock for Dayton. In the evening I make the return trip. I serve luncheon on the morning train and supper at night. No, it's just supper. You see, this is a buffet car, not a regular diner, and we don't have the same facilities for cooking large quantities.

"I have all my evenings at home, and I do not believe I am nearly as tired, even with the shaking of the train, as I would be if I worked in an office or factory."

For Serving Ice Cream.

There are modes even in the serving of ice cream. At present macaroon baskets, wafer boxes and a disguising covering of lady cake are among the most popular ways of serving this always acceptable dessert.

To make macaroon baskets dip the outer edges of five almond macaroons in the sirup obtained from melted granulated sugar. The first macaroon is used for the bottom of the basket and the others are stuck together to form a ring about it, exactly like the bur baskets we used to make when we were children. Fill this receptacle with ice cream and sprinkle ground macaroons on top.

Wafer boxes are put together in exactly the same way. Square wafers are the most desirable, two being used for the bottom and one at each end, standing upright. The ice cream should be cut into blocks that fit into the frame. Pink and white ice cream, garnished with cherries, makes an attractive color combination.

A novel way to serve brick ice cream is to cover the sides and ends of the brick with thick slices of lady cake. Cut the cream as usual. Each slice will have a frame of cake, contrasting prettily with the colors of the cream.

Vogue of Fur Trimmings.

Fur trimmings are by no means a neglected item this year, for the vogue for touches of fur trimmings has extended to suits, wraps, hats, dresses, blouses and negligees, says the Dry Goods Economist. The styles call for the use of expensive furs, too, as the color effects of high priced pelts are a special feature. This means that the demand now is for fitch, leopard, mole, skunk, red, white and taupe fox, ermine, chinchilla, squirrel and similar pelts.

Fancy muffs are another source of profit to the fur department that carries an attractive stock of loose furs. Women are purchasing from two to five muffs. One or two of these may be wholly of fur, but the others are made of suit or coat material and trimmed with wide fur bands. These muffs are large, and it is surprising how much fur is required in making an up to date muff.

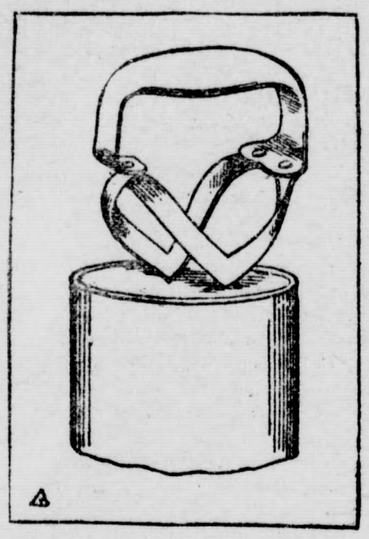
Then, too, the sale of muff pillows is no small item. They are expensive in the extremely soft new shapes and are well worth keeping in stock.

First Woman Through Canal.

Mrs. George W. Goethals, wife of the chief engineer of the Panama canal, sailed recently for Cristobal, declaring that she would not return to her home in this country until she had been through the canal. She expects to be the first woman to make the trip and will accompany her husband.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Can Opener That Removes Top With One Cut.



A can opener that is intended for quick work has been designed by an Arkansas man. A spirally curved cutting blade that forms two heart shaped sections is attached to a U shaped handle. At the bottoms of the sections are sharp points. To use this tool the cook has merely to press down upon it until it has sunk through the top of the tin clean to the handle, then give the implement one twist around and the entire top of the can is removed as swiftly and neatly as any one could wish. Where a number of cans have to be opened quickly this device is an obvious improvement over the type that slowly saws through the tin. Furthermore, there is here no danger of cutting the fingers on a jagged piece of lid.

Preserving Mint.

Drying is the best method. The mint should be picked just before it flowers and should be gathered on a dry day. Wash it thoroughly, spread on brown paper and place it in a warm oven to dry quickly, taking care, however, not to let it burn. When it is dry rub the leaves from the stems, cool, put into jars or bottles and cork tightly. The following recipe for mint sauce, using dried mint leaves, is recommended: Three tablespoonfuls of finely chopped mint leaves to two gills of French vinegar mixed with three ounces of powdered sugar.

Tongue With Spiced Sauce.

Brown two tablespoonfuls of butter and gradually add one pint of boiling water, stirring until smooth. Boil for a few minutes; then add a little grated lemon rind, one-third cupful of raisins and a pinch of salt, then six cloves, six peppers, one bay leaf tied in a piece of cloth. Cover the dish and simmer slowly until raisins are tender. Remove spices and add juice of one lemon. Cut the already cooked tongue into slices, add to sauce, cover and simmer until meat has become thoroughly seasoned. Serve with potato croquettes.

Scrambled Eggs.

A scrambled egg can be made to seem quite an important dish if a tablespoonful of milk and a dessertspoonful of breadcrumbs are mixed in with it. Pour the milk on to the crumbs to soak them. Beat up the eggs in the usual way and stir the soaked crumbs into it.

Scramble all together lightly and quickly. A single egg done in this way seems as much as two done by the usual method.

Nut Bread.

One-half cupful of sugar, one egg, one teaspoonful of salt, one and one-quarter cupfuls of milk, four cupfuls of sifted flour, four level teaspoonfuls baking powder, one cupful of chopped nuts. Beat egg, add sugar, then flour which has been sifted, with salt and baking powder alternately with milk, then nuts. Allow to stand in warm place twenty minutes and bake in moderate oven forty minutes.

Cheese Crisp.

Dissolve a piece of butter the size of a walnut in a chafing dish with three cupfuls of rich cheese dry enough to be grated. When melted and a pinch of salt and two tablespoonfuls of tomato ketchup. Serve on toasted thin crackers on warm plates piled high with very hot and crisp potato chips.

Damask and Double Damask.

Following is the distinctive meaning of damask and double damask as applied to table linen: The term damask refers to the satin finish in table linen. This finish is a matter of weaving, the facing that is given the flax thread. Double damask linen is a finer linen with the satin finish on both sides.

Almond Wafers.

Pour a layer of melted sweet chocolate into a flat greased pan and place a layer of blanched almonds on top of this. Cover these with another thin layer of melted chocolate and set away in a cool place. When perfectly dry cut them into thin wafers.

Baked Custard.

When making baked custard warm the milk before adding the eggs and there will be less danger of the custard turning watery. Bake in a pan set in boiling water.

WORK OF UNIONISM

Organized Labor Has Developed Industry.

A BUILDER OF PROSPERITY.

Trade Unions by Raising Wages Have Been Potent Factors In the Increase of the Nation's Wealth—Future of the Movement.

In a recent editorial giving credit to and recognizing the prominent part played by trade unionism in the upbuilding of national wealth the St. Louis Republic also hazards a look into the future. The Republic says:

In discussing the labor movement not enough is said about its purely economic effects. So far as business conditions are concerned, where should we be by this time if it had never been? Has unionism been a good thing or a bad thing for the country generally, from a purely commercial point of view?

Some industries, probably, would have developed about as they have, had it never come into being. They are industries where the operating organizations are naturally small and the contact between masters and men is direct and personal. It is the great industry in which a man is merely a name or a number instead of a person, with personal characteristics and rights, in the eyes of his employer, that has given rise to trade unionism.

Whatever else trade unionism has done or left undone, it has certainly raised wages generally throughout the industrial field. That is, it has caused the products of labor to be more widely distributed than they would or could have been without it.

Now, business flourishes best where there is the largest consuming public, and no public can consume largely without a large income. Speaking generally, union labor has not hoarded its income. It has spent it. The result is the highest general level of prosperity any nation has ever seen. By diffusion of wealth trade unionism has helped wonderfully to develop the department store, the American railroad, which affords the cheapest transportation in the civilized world; the American postal system and the American factory, with facilities for cheap large scale production previously undreamed of.

The congested money of the few cannot work such miracles. Large American fortunes are not locked up in land or hidden away in accumulations of treasure. They are in the instruments of production. And it is diffusion of wealth which has given our wealth its characteristic form.

Trade unionism, by forcing wages upward and ever upward, has unconsciously created the experimental department of the modern factory. It has set manufacturers and merchants to diminish labor cost by using labor effectively, not by lowering wages. This process has been a wonderful stimulus to American inventive genius and brain power. It has done much to give its distinctive character to our industrial civilization. It has had effects far beyond the actual area of the organized labor field.

What will be the next chapter in the history of the labor movement? The question is a fascinating one. The republic, with a keen consciousness of the perils of prophecy, ventures on a guess or two as to the future.

Notwithstanding the events of the past few weeks in St. Louis, the strike is becoming obsolete. This is in harmony with the general tendency of history. In the middle ages two citizens who desired to find out which was the better man used to put on armor and poke at each other with lances. Now they decide by forms of struggle which benefit society instead of merely breaking up hardware. Struggle is eternal, but the strike is foolish and wasteful and will give place to something better.

We believe also that ownership of industries by the workers will ultimately accomplish itself. The advance in this direction is constant. The general public knows little about it. It is a movement which no one has any special interest in advertising. In the long run the people with savings accounts shall inherit the earth. Now the working people of America own the savings banks, and there are many signs of the development of a new thrift and a new foresight on their part. The development of corporation management is helping to make such collective ownership of great properties possible.

We should not be surprised if the man now in early middle life should live to see the lines dividing the owning and the laboring "classes" fade out because the two had interpenetrated. Luxury and extravagance have not eliminated themselves by natural process in other societies because there was no one ready to take advantage of the opportunity which they created. In the workman with frugal habits, healthy American ambitions and a bank account we see a person who is bound to make financial as well as economic history.

Both Sides Transgress.

Bishop McFaul of Trenton declares "it all resolves itself into an infringement of the commandment, 'Thou shalt not steal.'" The employer who swells his income by screwing down wages to a minimum is dishonest; the employee who skimps his work is also dishonest. Both violate the commandment, "Thou shalt not steal." They would not be guilty of such violations if they were loyal to Christian principles.

FIX MINIMUM WAGE.

Women Toilers of Portland, Ore., Must Be Paid $8.64 Per Week.

The first ruling to be rendered under a compulsory minimum wage law in the United States for adult women workers was made recently by the Oregon industrial welfare commission. The ruling is as follows:

First.—It is prohibited to employ women in manufacturing establishments in the city of Portland, Ore., for more than nine hours in any day or fifty-four hours in any week.

Second.—The noon lunch period for women employes in manufacturing establishments in Portland, Ore., shall not be less than forty-five minutes in length.

Third.—It is prohibited to employ experienced adult women workers engaged by time rate of payment in any manufacturing establishment in Portland, Ore., at a weekly wage of less than $8.64 for a fifty-four-hour week, any lesser amount being hereby declared inadequate to supply the necessary cost of living to such women factory workers and maintain them in health.

The law under which the commission was created and given its powers provides a penalty for conviction of violation of the commission's ruling of a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $100 or imprisonment in the county jail for not less than ten days nor more than three months, or by both fine and imprisonment.

Any employer who discharges or in any other manner discriminates against any employe because she has testified or is about to testify, or because the employer believes she is about to testify, in an investigation or proceeding under the law shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $100.

Any woman worker who is paid by her employer less than the minimum wage to which she is entitled under the commission's ruling may recover in a civil action the full amount of the minimum wage, less what she has already been paid, together with such attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court. Any agreement for her to work at less than the established minimum wage shall be no defense in such action

LABOR'S GLEANING.

No sun ever set to rise no more.
No cloud appeared but passed away.
No storm ever raged in rattle and roar
But left a calmer, peaceful day.

In skies that hang over brawn and brain
That build for state and cherished home,
The beautiful things of worth and gain,
Are clouds that hide the cleared dome.

Should we rise and be brave when the fight
Is for life, its pleasures and peace,
Its calm and comfort and sweet delight,
Or waver while perils increase?

Nay, nay, for the strong and steady and true
Shall grasp the victory bright.
There is wrong in the reign of the few
When the many are in the right.

Ye of toil face the foe in your steel.
Lay down not on an arm of defense.
Struggle on for your homes and their weal,
And triumph be your recompense.
—John B. Powell.

NEW JERSEY CONVICTS.

No Longer to Be Employed as Competitors of Free Labor.

Governor Fielder of New Jersey recently refused to approve extension of the contract of the Crescent Garment company for employment of convicts at the state prison at Trenton. The board of prison inspectors advised that the extension be approved.

The governor, however, announced that the state had decided upon a new prison policy in the employment of inmates of the various penal institutions. Hereafter the prisoners will be employed out of doors as much as possible on state roads, on a prison farm, where supplies will be raised and sold to the various state institutions, and in a quarry which will be purchased and operated for the benefit of the state. The product will be used in state road work. Pending the working out of the new system Governor Fielder believes that employment can be found for a large number of men thrown out of work by the closing of the contract.

TRADE UNION BRIEFS.

Members of the Laundry Workers' union have been assessed $1 to form a strike fund.

Bricklayers in New York city receive 77 cents per hour. They work forty-four hours per week.

A new trade union house of the woodworkers of Germany has recently been completed at a cost of over $250,000 at Berlin.

The New York State Federation of Labor adopted a resolution asking for a law to provide for a minimum wage scale of $15 per week.

Pearl button workers of New York have secured recognition of the union, a nine hour workday and 10 per cent increase in wages. They were on strike five months.

The arbitration board which is hearing the demands of trainmen and conductors must make its award within forty-five days after its first meeting, which took place Sept. 11.

NOTABLES IN THE LIMELIGHT

Henry van Dyke, Minister to the Netherlands.

Dr. Henry van Dyke, the new minister to the Netherlands, is a noted scholar and publicist, and his literary fame is world wide. He is an ardent advocate of peace, and just before his departure for his new post he said: "Diplomacy, at least in one of its aspects, is the art of peacemaking on a large scale. Peace means infinitely more than the absence of war. It means order and security and fair dealing and mutual good will."

The new minister at The Hague is a native of Germantown, Pa., sixty-one years old and was graduated from Princeton in 1873. From 1877 to 1879 he studied at the University of Berlin, when he was ordained a minister of the Presbyterian church. He went at once to the United Congregational church at Newport, R. I., and remained there until 1882, when he was called to the Brick Presbyterian church, New York city. Since 1900 he has been professor of English literature at Princeton university. Dr. van Dyke has also been preacher at Harvard and Lyman Beecher lecturer at Yale. In 1908-9 he was American lecturer at the Sorbonne at Paris. Many honors have been showered upon him by universities, societies and his church because of his achievements. He has found time, aside from his duties, to write many books and a great deal of poetry.

Best Man at White House Wedding.

Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, head of the Labrador mission for deep sea fishermen, who will be the best man for Francis B. Sayre when he is married to the president's daughter, Miss Jessie Wilson, at the White House on Tuesday, Nov. 25, has won the plaudits of the civilized world for his heroic work among the hardy fishers of the north. Mr. Sayre spent two summers with Dr. Grenfell in Labrador and formed a friendship for the physician.

Since Dr. Grenfell went to Labrador in 1892 he has accomplished wonders for the alleviation of suffering in that inhospitable region. He has established four hospitals at various points along the coast, and in the summer these are supplemented by hospital ships that cruise along the coast. Cooperative stores, established by the doctor-preacher, have been instrumental in lowering the cost of food and clothing at least 50 per cent. Besides this practical work, he has raised the moral standard of the people.

Born in England in 1865, Dr. Grenfell was educated at the University of London and at Oxford. He served under Sir Frederick Treves at London hospital and in 1887 began his life work as a medical missionary in England. He has been honored by many institutions of learning and in 1907 was decorated companion of St. Michael and St. George by King George. He is the author of several books.

MYSTERY OF A SENTRY POST

A Strange Episode of the Spanish-American War.

During the Spanish-American war my regiment of United States infantry occupied a single position in Cuba for quite awhile. We were not very near an enemy and kept out no vedettes or pickets, the colonel being satisfied with the usual chain of sentinels. There was one sentry beat overlooking a valley from which every man posted at the evening relief disappeared. No cry, no sound of any kind, was heard at post No. 8, but the sentry placed there was not found when the corporal of the guard took a man to relieve him, nor was he ever heard of afterward. Some concluded that an enemy crawled up from below, stabbed him and took his body away. Some concluded that the post was haunted and the sentry was carried away by a ghost.

When the first man disappeared the officer of the guard reported the matter to the colonel, who, thinking that it would be better that the next man to stand post on No. 8 should not know of the occurrence, ordered the officer to keep the matter a secret and if there were inquiries about the missing man among his comrades to give out that he had been ordered away on a special service. So the second man did not know of the mystery of the first, nor the third of the second, nor the fourth of the third. The fourth man was the last to vanish, for after he had gone the regiment went to the front.

I was a member of Company C, and we knew more about the disappearances than the officers thought we did, but we didn't know what had become of the sentries. It was the prevailing opinion that the men were murdered by hostile Spanish citizens, but with what object we were ignorant. After the war closed I came north with the rest of the command, but eight years later went to Cuba on business, and there one day, while passing a sugar plantation, who should I see sitting before a workman's cabin but John Henderson, the last man who had disappeared from sentry post No. 8. At first he pretended not to know me, but I looked him square in the eye and told him he couldn't fool me. Then he told me the following story:

"When placed on post and left by the retreating relief I stood for awhile uncertain whether to risk death by some unearthly means or by being shot for deserting my beat.

"While I was deliberating I heard a girl's laugh and, looking down, saw a merry face and two black eyes peering up at me. The girl had a basket on her arm full of flowers and began to pelt me with them. I supposed she was simply passing that way and didn't connect her with the ghost who had spirited away the other sentries. I seized one or two posies and threw them back at her. She was too pretty to keep at a distance, and I invited her to come up and sit with me on the slope. It wasn't long before I had my arms around her and stole a kiss.

"She spoke some English and, pointing to a house below, told me she was on her way to a dance to take place there. We soon heard the sound of music, and the girl begged me to go down with her, have a dance and get back before the relief came. I was tempted and fell. I went with her, danced several times and was thinking of returning when I was surrounded and made a prisoner.

"They were about to take me out to shoot me when the girl who had arranged for my capture stood in the door and jabbered Spanish at them with constantly growing irritation. I didn't know then what she said, but learned afterward that, having given them three victims, she wished the fourth to be spared. Finally she prevailed, partly by threats to expose them to our troops above and partly by her influence over them. I was released and, accompanied by the girl, started up to camp. I had plenty of time to get there, but was dallying with her, she showing plainly enough that she had gone daft on me. I tried to tear myself away from her, but couldn't. I knew she had betrayed three other men, but her preference for me caught me, and while I was trying to get away from her I heard the relief visit my post. Then I knew I was too late, for if I went to camp I would be shot for being absent from my post.

"That threw the whole matter into the hands of the girl. It was the same as having sold my soul to the devil. I deserted, and we went away together. She deserted, too, for she never went back home. Her people were Spaniards, and the men who had been bent on shooting me were Spaniards. They lived about there with their families, and had the girl told on them, as she threatened to do, our colonel would have arrested and shot them. They had only consented to let me go on her promise that she would keep me from getting back to the command. Of course, not understanding Spanish, I didn't know this at the time or I should have been forewarned."

Henderson had married the girl, and they had several children. In that country women fade early, and upon an introduction I found the wife homely enough to use for a scarecrow. I have remembered the incident since as a warning to all men not to be led away from their duty by a pretty face. Henderson was living in terror, conscious of being a deserter, and all because he had listened to a siren.

SHIPPING A SKELETON

It Required Very Careful Handling

By OSCAR COX

Mark Hudson was station agent at Pembuton Junction. Mark was in the freight house one morning looking over the boxes and bales scattered about when he heard a wagon drive up outside and stop. A young man about eighteen years of age entered and said:

"I've got a box out here I'd like to ship to Hallowell. You want to be mighty particular about it because it contains something breakable."

"That's all very well so far as I am concerned, but I can't answer for the case after the box leaves my keeping."

"I've marked instructions on the lid," replied the youngster. "Come out and have a look."

The agent went out with the shipper and saw a box about five and a half feet long, two feet wide and eighteen inches high.

"Corpse?" he asked.

"No, but it's the next thing to it; it's a skeleton."

"A skeleton! Isn't that a queer thing for you to be shipping from this point?" exclaimed the agent suspiciously.

"Well, yes; it would be without an explanation. I saw an ad. in a newspaper the other day for a skeleton. I knew they had one they didn't need in the physiology lecture room of our college. I'm a Merton student, and I bought it. I've sold it to the advertiser and have made some money on it—that is, if I get it there without breaking any of the bones."

Merton college was six miles distant from the junction. There was a co-ed institution connected with it.

The box was lying on its bottom, and tacked to the cover was a card on which were written the instructions:

Breakable. Keep this side up most of the time. Stand on end occasionally for awhile.

On one end was another card stating that when the box was stood on end that end was to be up. In no case was the other end to be up. Hudson looked at the box meditatively and read the directions.

"What's the use of being so careful with a skeleton?" he asked. "If it isn't packed properly I don't want to ship it, or if I do it must be at the owner's risk. If it is packed properly it should stand ordinary handling."

"I'll tell you," said the shipper, assuming a faraway expression. "Those bones were once the framework of a beautiful girl."

"How do you know that?" interrupted the agent.

"That's the tradition in college," resumed the youth. "Now, in packing it I couldn't divest my mind of what it had been in life. It seemed horrible to put the poor creature in cotton or excelsior or anything like that. I couldn't do it. I've put her in just as she would like to be put in if she were alive, lying peacefully upon her back, or when that end is up and this one down she stands like a beautiful statue—the Venus de' Medici, for instance."

The speaker was so affected that he wiped moisture from his eyes with his handkerchief.

"I don't think," said the agent, "that I'll receipt for the article. If I should make myself responsible for a medical Venus or anything like that and there should be a breakage, with claims against the road for big damages, I'd get fired."

There were a few moments of deliberative silence between the two, after which the shipper said:

"I expect you're right about it. I wouldn't assume the risk if I were you. If some galoot of a handler should stand the box wrong side up it might break the skeleton's neck. That would knock off a big sum from its value. Besides, consider what it once was. How would you like to have a sister of yours sent off in a box and stood wrong end"—

"Oh, give us a rest on that part of the business. I understand that you've got a piece of merchandise to be shipped at the ordinary rates."

"You haven't any feeling," the other continued. "I can't resign all that remains on earth of what was once a delicate girl to such hands as yours. I'm going along with the box myself, so that I may see it is handled tenderly. Will you take it on those terms?"

"Well, yes. I don't mind if you'll take the responsibility."

The agent took hold of the box and was proceeding to remove it when he discovered that it weighed something like a hundred pounds.

"That's the heaviest skeleton I ever handled," he remarked.

"How many have you handled?" asked the shipper.

"I don't know that I ever handled any."

"Then how can you tell what one of them should weigh? Take hold of that end and I'll take this. Now she goes." And the box was carried into the freight station and stood up on the right end. Then the agent went to a desk and, taking a blank receipt, asked the young man his name.

"John Smith," was the reply.

"Any middle name?"

"No."

"Where to?"

"Hallowell."

Hallowell was a town some twenty miles distant.

"You don't need the name of the person the skeleton was when alive, do you?" asked Mr. Smith.

The agent turned from his writing and, looking the shipper in the face, said:

"Young man, will you be offended if I say something plain to you?"

"No; drive on."

"You're the biggest fool that ever came into this station."

"You've hit it right, pard. I entered college ten years ago, and I'm a freshman yet. I've been turned back with nine classes. I was to have been graduated with the class of '04. Now I am at the foot of the class of '14."

"Oh, give us a rest. I've something to do besides chinning with an idiot. There's your receipt. I'll put the box on the next train that comes along, at 12:05. That's an hour."

"Isn't there a train before that time?"

"No."

At this point a carriage was driven up to the passenger entrance of the station, and Dr. Bidwell, president of Merton college, and Dr. Arabella Caxton, president of the woman's college of the same institution, alighted. The agent, who had charge of both the passenger and freight departments, was proceeding to the ticket office when Mr. Smith stopped him and said:

"See here, old man; don't talk about that skeleton I'm shipping. These two prexys were opposed to the sale, and they might not like to see it go."

"Oh, I mind my own business," replied the agent and went on his way, while Mr. Smith put himself out of sight among the boxes in the freight house.

"Have you seen anything," Dr. Bidwell asked the agent, "of a young man and a young girl going off on any of the trains?"

"No; I haven't," was the laconic reply.

Dr. Bidwell turned to Dr. Caxton and remarked, "Do you suppose they have gone from the upper station?"

"They may," replied Dr. Caxton.

"When does the next train pass?" the agent was asked.

"At 12:05."

After a consultation the two presidents decided that Dr. Bidwell should go to the upper station and Dr. Caxton should remain and watch the 12:05 train. Other college officials were taking care of other routes. Dr. Bidwell drove off, leaving his colleague in the waiting room. When the 12:05 train came along the agent wheeled Mr. Smith's box on a truck to the baggage car, and it was lifted inside.

"Corpse?" asked the man on the car.

"No; skeleton."

"Mighty heavy skeleton."

Meanwhile Mr. Smith, when sure he was not observed, swung himself on to the rear platform of the last car of the train.

When the train was receding in the distance and President Caxton was leaving the station Mr. Smith made his way to the baggage car and saw that the box rested in a comfortable position for its contents till Hallowell was reached, then superintended its removal into the freight house of that station. Calling for tools, he opened the box and handed out as pretty a structure of bones with appropriate flesh as had ever been shipped by that or any other railroad.

"Can you direct me," he said, "to a parson?"

"Certainly," said the astonished agent. "You'll find one right under that spire you see over there," pointing. "The parsonage is next the church."

The girl, a student of the woman's college of the university, clung to Mr. Smith, whose real name was Jim Stevens, a sophomore, and the two hurried to the clergyman's house and were there united in the bonds of matrimony.

That ended the curriculum of both Mr. Stevens and his wife as college students. The affair created considerable commotion in the men's and women's colleges, and the faculties of both institutions seriously considered the separation of the two on the ground that they furnished too favorable opportunities for elopements.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

If you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to
